Undoubtedly one of Irrfan Khan's finest, if not THE finest. Each of the dialogue throughout the movie was so normal and natural, and yet so extraordinarily thought-provoking that

This is one of the movies of all time among all genres. I myself am not particularly a big fan of animes, but this movie touched me to my very core. If you enjoy drama and romance, then

"Oppenheimer" is a biographical thriller film written and directed by Christopher Nolan ("The Dark Knight trilogy", "Inception", "Interstellar", "Dunkirk"), based on the biography "American Prometheus" by Kai Bird and Martin J. Sherwin. Starring Cillian Murphy in the lead role, in addition to Matt Damon, Robert Downey Jr., Emily Blunt, and Florence Pugh, it subverts the usual biopic formula to create a brilliantly layered examination of a man throughout all of his incredible accomplishments and fundamental flaws. During the height of the Second World War, theoretical physicist J. Robert Oppenheimer (Cillian Murphy) is recruited by the United States government to oversee the "Manhattan Project", a top secret operation intended to develop the world's first nuclear weapons. After becoming acquainted with the project's director Major General Leslie Groves (Matt Damon), Oppenheimer and the General come to an agreement that the best place to carry out such an undertaking is the vast desert of Los Alamos, New Mexico ...MORE →

You'll have to have your wits about you and your brain fully switched on watching Oppenheimer as it could easily get away from a nonattentive viewer. This is intelligent filmmaking which shows its audience great respect. It fires dialogue packed with information at a relentless pace and jumps to very different times in Oppenheimer's life continuously through its 3 hour runtime. There are visual clues to guide the viewer through these times but again you'll have to get to grips with these quite quickly. This relentlessness helps to express the urgency with which the US attacked its chase for the atomic bomb before Germany could do the same. An absolute career best performance from (the consistently brilliant) Cillian Murphy anchors the film. This is a nailed on Oscar performance. In fact the whole cast are fantastic (apart maybe for the sometimes overwrought Emily Blunt performance). RDJ is also particularly brilliant in a return to proper acting after his decade or so of calling it in. The screenplay is dense and ...MORE →

I don't say this often about media, be it movies, books, television series or music because i rarely ever feel reflected in the mediums or find it hard to see the true fine personable details and struggles of a character represented in these mediums but I love this movie especially the characters because of how authentic and close to reality they feel.

Logan Lermans portrayal of a shy awkward kid wrestling through the trials and tribulations of a daunting high school whilst life drowning in silent loneliness is all too often a uniquely relatable experience to many going through such trying times. Although the people who do pick on Charlie can seem a bit like vapid caricatures but that sense of twisted mockery and bullying can be easily internalized by the viewer as multiple streams of negative experiences that accumulate through adolescence and ...MORE →
